BAHEP welcomes Qwaltec, Inc.

BAY AREA HOUSTON, TEXAS – Bay Area Houston Economic Partnership (BAHEP) is excited to announce its newest member Qwaltec, a Women Owned Small Business (WOSB) dedicated to making a difference on and off the planet. Qwaltec builds and operates custom, efficient, and cost-effective mission control solutions for space flight.

President of Bay Area Houston Economic Partnership, Brian Freedman, shared “Qwaltec is a great addition to Bay Area Houston Economic Partnership, and we look forward to bringing their aerospace and engineering expertise to the Bay Area region.”

Shawn Linam, President, CEO, and co-founder of Qwaltec, expressed “We are very excited to be a member of BAHEP to build closer relationships with the Bay Area space community. Even more, we are enthusiastic about being a part of this organization that influences and shapes the economic growth of the region.”

What Does Qwaltec Have to Offer?

Operating on a global scale, Qwaltec has a passion for innovation and provides end-to-end mission operation solutions through trusted engineers and government/commercial partners. As a WOSB in the aerospace and defense industry, Qwaltec is driven to bring space within reach. Qwaltec services include ground system operations and engineering, mission readiness, systems engineering, software engineering, technical training, control center development, and operations assessments.

Founders of Qwaltec began their careers at NASA Johnson Space Center and continue to support its mission globally for human space flight, science, and exploration. Qwaltec headquarters is located in Tempe, Arizona, with team members across various locations including Oxnard, California; Colorado Springs, CO, Las Cruces, New Mexico; Greenbelt, Maryland; and Wallops Island, Virginia.
